

American League Boss May Force Champions to Make Tour to Pacific Coast

BAN JOHNSON MAY COMPEL CHAMPIONS TO GO TO COAST

Boss of American League Promised Promoters That World's Series Teams Would Make Long Tour.

Income Tax Experts Prepare to Make Phillies Pay Their Share Toward Supporting Government.

Ban Johnson, boss of the American League, may insist on the world's champion Red Sox taking part in the proposed trip to the Pacific coast, according to dispatches from Philadelphia today. The champions turned down the offer from the California promoters, because they could not guarantee each player going at least $1,000. However, Ban Johnson may use his influence, and even compel the Red Sox to make the tour.

While on the Pacific coast last winter, Ban Johnson had the plan shown him, and he thought so well of it as to have the national commission rescind its rule forbidding the world's champions to engage in barnstorming following the big series. He is believed to have promised Bill Lange, the coast promoter, to have the tour made, and Johnson never goes back on his word.

The teams were guaranteed $15,000 between them. This proved much too small for the world's champions, who flatly refused. The Phillies, with the exception of Chalmers and Whitted, were willing to make the tour. Whitted is to be married in New York next week and declines to leave the East. Though Eddie Burns and "Gavvy" Cravath, both Californians, did not think the games would pay, both expressed themselves willing to go, if the tour was decided upon.

An offer of $10,000 guarantee has been received from a Kansas City newspaper for one game to be played there between the Red Sox and the Phils.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—The members of the Philadelphia Nationals who got in for a slice of the world's series melon will have to give Uncle Sam a piece of their cut, through the operation of the income tax law. When they received their checks for something over $2,000 they were susceptible to the law, it was pointed out today. This added to their salaries for the season, brings them within the income tax law, providing they are not already subject to its provisions, according to the ruling of the Treasury Department last year.

TODAY'S SPORTORIAL

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

Once more has the world's series developed stars from those not expected to deliver. If you will recall, four weeks ago Duffy Lewis was taken out of the Boston line-up BECAUSE HE COULD NOT HIT. He did not play against the Mackmen in Philadelphia, BECAUSE HE COULD NOT HIT. He staggered around a while and finally got back into the game against the Yankees and at last arrived here. Manager Carrigan played him here, but Lewis was a joke at the bat. He did little or nothing. He misjudged a few fly balls and failed utterly to make an impression with the stick. He seemed to have his head down. It was hinted that Olaf Henriksen would play in his place when the big series got under way. But he didn't.

From being a sort of joke, Duffy Lewis looked like a million dollars in the big series. He won two games by himself with bingles in the right places. He tied yesterday's with a thunderous drive for the c-wit, allowing Harry Hooper, another alleged light-hitting player, to clinch things with a homer in the ninth. But Duffy Lewis can afford to run around now with his head up. He has been the brightest individual star of the world's series of 1915. He has never fallen down. Where Tris Speaker lost flies in the sun at Braves' Field, Lewis clung to everything sent his way. Where Speaker fell down in the pinches at the bat, Lewis has delivered the goods. All of which goes to show that season records amount to little in a world's series.

Second only to Duffy Lewis for the individual glories of the 1915 world's series is Harry Hooper, a light hitter in the season gone by. Hooper hit for .235 during the American League campaign, and never was expected to do anything in the world's series. Lewis held up above .300 for a long time but broke badly in the last two months, winding up with .188 for his average. He was turned down by almost every sporting writer as a possible candidate for laurel wreaths in this series for the world's honors. Yet he came through with the stick better than any other member of his team, and close behind was Harry Hooper. Let's quit this anti-series dope hereafter, boys; there's nothing to it.

Baseball is going to rest for a while, now that the big title series is ended. Washington, in particular, is going to think of bowling, football, basketball, and boxing for several months before the Old Fox begins stirring the embers to build a new fire for 1916. It is well, too, for baseball to quit. It will have all the greater attraction next spring when Manager Griffith begins summoning his athletes to the training camp to prepare for another campaign on the diamond. Meanwhile we shall obtain all our amusement out of the ring, the gridiron, and the alleys. There is plenty there, too, boys.

Jesse Willard has been given an offer of $30,000 to meet the winner of Jim Coffey-Frank Moran bout at Madison Square Garden next Tuesday night. To draw down this $30,000, all the world's champion has to do is go ten rounds at the Garden with the winner of the coming bout. Nevertheless, it is doubtful if Willard accepts this handsome offer. Willard is in the hands of the shrewdest manager in the business, Tom Jones, the barber of Kewanee. Willard is now collecting some easy money. It isn't $30,000 for half an hour's work, but it totals up pretty near as much. Jones will never let go of that easy money to take a chance in the ring. He's no dog to drop a bone for a shadow. So calm yourselves. Willard will never enter the ring again until next summer, if he does then. He is now out to get the money, and he's going to get it before he takes a chance with that title he now sports.

Now that the baseball fever has ended with the closing of the world's series, Washington can turn to the gridiron at the Hilltop for its entertainment, and the very first offering is one of the South Atlantic championship contests between North Carolina and Georgetown. The Tar Heels consider their best game of the year with Virginia at Richmond, but it is expected that next season they will insist on a later game here with the Blue and Gray. North Carolina has one of the best football teams in the Southeast Atlantic section, sharing the honors with Virginia, Washington and Lee, North Carolina A. and M. and Georgetown. Tomorrow's game is the first between these two teams in several years, and the fans are already preparing to journey to the Hilltop to see them in action.

era then that the world's series money was a rarity and was not a regular income. The department ruled otherwise, with the result that several hundred dollars paid by the fans this year to see the series will find its way into the coffers of the Government. A single man whose income is $1,000 or over and a married man whose income is $1,000 or over are subject to the tax. Most all the Philadelphia players this year have incomes exceeding these figures.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—The world's champions have received their checks, each collecting $3,825.80. Mike McNally, Trainer Green and Secretary Eddie Riley split one share among them. Taxonomists will be made to President Lannin and Manager Carrigan next week.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—The Phillies have divided their world's series melon, each man drawing $2,922.31. One share was split among Joe Oeschger, Trainer Mike Deo and one or two club attaches.

Law to Lead Tigers.
PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 15.—"Buz" Law, Tiger football and baseball star, will captain the nine this season. Law was unanimously chosen when Capt. Jesse Hoyt resigned.

Dalzell's Record

Samuel Dalzell, one of the ranking players at Chevy Chase, came into his own yesterday in the Middle Atlantic Golf Association team tourney at Columbia Club. Dalzell's card of 189 for eighteen holes found his second round equaling the record of 78 for the course, breaking the season mark of 75. Dalzell placed his name with those of D. K. Jackson, W. R. Tucker, and Walter Travis, who have negotiated the 18 holes in 75.

The Living Telephone.

Some time after the close of the Franco-German war the Prussian Union drill was introduced into the British cavalry. The first men to be exercised in it were a corps of Household Cavalry (Blues) at Windsor. They were extended, each some 800 yards from his fellow, many miles of country being covered.

This verbal message was given to the soldier on the extreme right to pass along: "Enemy's videttes at Englefield Green." It got hopelessly muddled half way.

The amazed officer waiting to receive it got this communication from the trooper on the extreme left: "England's beta paid by the Queen."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.
